

Assistant Head Teacher – Teaching and Learning | Nottingham University Samworth Academy

Location: Nottingham

School Type: 11-19 Academy School

Salary: L14 - L18

The Assistant Head Teacher – Teaching and Learning will be responsible for training NUSA staff to deliver effective lessons and promoting the active involvement of students in their own learning. This will include school target setting for individuals and groups of students for regular review.

You will oversee the development of a robust assessment framework and will monitor and evaluate classroom practice. As an experienced practitioner you will provide guidance and support for colleagues in improving their classroom practice and will promote the use of ICT to enhance and extend students' learning. The Assistant Head Teacher will model and support strategies to promote high standards of behaviour and respect for value of learning. You will set a culture of high expectations and encourage collaboration from staff and students on raising achievement in the school.

We are specifically seeking candidates with a track record in securing the highest standards of teaching and learning in a school setting. You will have the ability to play a leading role in the school improvement planning process and to identify key areas of strength and weakness in the school. You will be attracted by NUSA's positive school ethos, in which every individual is treated with dignity and respect and the safety and welfare of children and young people is paramount.

As our Assistant Head Teacher, you will be a visible leader around the site overseeing the operation of duty teams and attending extra-curricular events. You will be expected to understand the importance of accountability and to support the governing body and staff in meeting their responsibilities to account for the performance of the school. We respect and value our school community at NUSA. As such all our staff are committed to promoting diversity and inclusion and enhancing opportunities for every student. To be selected you must be resolute and determined to succeed and demonstrate a moral compass to improve outcomes for young people.
